The Sparrows and Cotton Burs. ville, Alabama, committed suicide by stab-bing himself, last Friday. 'His body was found in the woods near Huntsville. Pe-the Rescue,' which invited our farmers to use those busy little specimens of the feathered tribe for the purpose of ridding their cotton-fields of worms, lice and other vermin. Now, although I am neither a farmer or son of a farmer, I take some interest in the prosperity of this my adopted State. It appears to me that no effort should be spared to rid our growing crops of these fell destroyers, but I doubt if your suggestion will fill the bill. You appear to have lost sight of the fact that the English sparrows is purely and unequivocally domestic in his habits (fringilla domestic a), and when taken from one place to another and turned loose he immediately seeks the most crowded thoroughfare, and seems the most happy in locations where the "genus homo" most "de congregate." I think that Mr. Selden, o ur city, who so thoughtfully imported a umber of these birds a few years ago, and has since taken a great interest in their wel are, will bear me out when I say that, al though those that he brought here and turned loose at his place, at the head of Adams street, gradually scattered all over the city and there rapidly increased, not one can be found a mile from the city. I think, Mr. tor, you will find me correct in my views. sparrows will not take kindly to

Let us hear from others on the sub-G. A. T. Who Was Cain's Wife? Mr. EDITOR-Having long admired your Simday reading, a brief essay on an exceedingly interesting topic. I am reminded of it because, • few evenings since, while strolling down one of our streets, behind a lovely blonde and a sparkling brunette, I heard the latter say: "Who do you suppose was Cain's wife, anyhow?" They had evidently been discussing that question. This reminded me reises at the last meeting of the Bluff of an able and interesting lecture delivered of an able and interesting lecture delivered before the New York geographical society, in April, 1876, by Judge Daley, of that city, on PREHISTORIC MAN. It attracted much attention among the scien > devoted several columns of comment to it Judge Daley said that geographical discoveries led him to the belief that man existed before the glacial period, which ended more than eighty thousand years ago. Discoverie point to the existence of races on this weste continent long anterior to the visits by the sea kings of Iceland and Scandinavia, and, of course, long before the discoveries of Columbus, four hundred years later. What of the age of the pigmies of Tennessee? What of that of the mounds lately ex-amined near New Madrid, Missouri, and found to contain sculptured images exactly esembling those taken from the ruins of Pompeii, and now in the royal museum at Naples? This seems to lead to the belief that this country was inhabited by an artrace of people several thousand years ago; a race that perished in some terrible convulsion, and left no tradition, even, save the silent story of those mounds. Not only is the earth probably much older than it is generally hought to be, and not only may man have ived thousands of years before the generally ccepted date of Adam's creation, but disoveries lead to the belief that there were many more races than one. Indeed, no one can read Moses's account of Adam's family without leaning to the idea that Cain found before W. L. Duff, justice of the peace, for a distinct people in

THE LAND OF NOD. Moses evidently wrote the account of the creation as it was handed down to him, by tradition; and the early portion of that retradition; and the early portion of that referred only to the region about the Euphrates, pear which was the Garden of Eden. That garden was not a potato patch, as all will admit who will read the eighth to the fourteenth verses of second Genesis, and Adam had his hands full in keeping it in order. I should say it was a layer as all west Ten.

Man the wintesses. I was present with the wintesses. I was present was used by Colonel Duff during the trial as reported in this morning's Aralanche. I was gone about ten or fifteen minutes after the with high office of executive of the high office of exec nessee. I have always thought, too, that the "land of Nod," where Mr. Cain made Mrs. Cain's acquaintance, was a peopled country when Cain entered it. That is the mode in premiums to the best-drilled company of vol-unteer soldiers, to be open to all contestants from any quarter.

In deprecating his sad fate, Cain said to the Lord: "Every one that findeth me shall slay me." Could he have alluded to his own family in saying that? As the Lord had made him "a fugitive and a vagabond," could he have been alluding to the kindred from whose presence he was to flee? Must he not have known there were other people besides Adam's family to slay him if he should happen to stray among them? Could he be "slain" if there was no one else but his own family from whom he was a "fugitive?" This idea is confirmed when, in reply to Cain's lament, and to calm his fears that every one who should find him would slay him. God said to him: "Whoso-ever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on Cain lest any, finding him, should slay him." Can it be thought God would have thus spoken to Cain had there been no people on the earth but Cain's family? Would God have threatened vengeance on any one who might slay Cain had there been no one to do the slaying? Would the Lord have "set a on Cain to warn his father and family not to slay him? Would be have set that mark on him had there been no people living but Adam's family? Was not that mark set on him to warn other and strange people not to kill him? It seems to me that our old friend Adam was wrathy against Cain, who, naturally, wished to get out of his enraged papa'sway, and he "lit out," as most murderers have done ever since. Striking out for dear life, he came to the Land of Nod; and found a wife in a ravishingly beautiful woman living, perhaps, in Persia. She must have been a musician, for her attendant, Julah, was the first one we hear of as performing on the harp; and as his half-brother, Tubal-Cain, was the first artificer in brass and iron, I am satisfied the Cain family had a high old time of it, with harps, and timbrels, and cymbals, and all the regular equipment of a first-class cornet band. How they must have "waked the cchoes" with the delightful serenades given in the moonlight of that luxurious cli mate! No wonder Lamech, one of Cain's descendants, took unto himself two wives, and then and there founded Mormonism, with Adah and Zillah as his ministering an-

Peter Mentges in the Recorder's Court -His Sensational Appeal for Ad-Drunken Man and his Unruly Conduct.

Mentges and myself in the office after Con-stable Powell left until he returned with the injury. witnesses for trial. Respectfully, H. M. TALLEY. Colonel W. L. Duff, City Recorder:

I read with surprise the article published in the Avalanche of the sixth instant, cap-tioned "An Official 'Swear," and pro-Mentges were the only persons present, awaiting the arrival of witnesses, whom Constable Powell was summoning, and conversation about the assault was kept up between Mentges and myself; you repeatedly stopped Mentges in his tirade of abuse of myself. It is needless to add that the statement in the Avalanche is in substance and inference not only untrue, but at variance with everything that did take place. Instead of your request-ing Mentges to make a statement—this is again untrue-the court was not in session, and a statement is usual only in the final pro-gress of a cause—you had to quiet him repeatedly, in a manner very emphatic. As far as the "apology" to Mentges is concerned, that is another draft on the fancy of the paragraphist, and had no part in the matter You did not curse Mentges, but sternly in formed him he could not abuse me; nor di Mentge: use the language used in the Aralanche article, nor make you out as the "lit-tle demon" has asserted. This statement is due you, and future facts will vindicate what I here write. This statement is scarcely necessary in this community, where you are so well known, and I only make the correction for those who might be led into he error of the fanciful sketch drawn by the Avalanchian. Respectfully, c. curtis. trial, and went back to Mentges's saloon to cummon the witnesses in the case, and left Colonel Duff, Mr. Mentges, C. Curtis, and H. M. Tally (colored), all in the office awaiting my return with the witnesses. I was present angrily to each other, and Colonel Duff was trying to stop them. JOHN D. POWELL, Constable Shelby county.

Mr. Hudson is a atleman of unquestionable integrity, a man of great learning, and withal possessed of that judicious intelligence which goes so far to complete the necessary qualities of a chief executive of a State. No man in Mississippi is more truly esteemed by his friends and ac aintances than Thomas J. Hudson. We sincerely hope that he will respond favorably to the call, which is, in every way, merited by him. The call is as follows

To Hon, T. J. Hudson, Lamar, Mississipple Your numerous friends in north Mississip pi, and elsewhere in the State, would be much pleased to hear your name presented to the Democratic State convention, soon to meet in Jackson, as a candidate for the nomnation of governor. We are aware that aims and qualifications have been warmly and enthusiastically urged by their friends and advocates through the press. Without ragement to any of the aspirants, we think that your claims on popular support, and your qualifications for the high office, are equal to those of any candidate whose name has been mentioned. Your past distinguished service in the legislature of the State; your levotion to its material interests, and your through the press; your firmness of purpose, your intrepidity of character, your intimate knowledge of the duties and requirements of

So, with another promise to leave my husband in a few days, I salied forth from the seedy abode of "the divine Isaac" to the sanctum-sanctorum of Mr. Connelly, No. 252 Broadway. He had just returned from lunch, and looked like a giant refreshed. His fullmoon face, with its bronzed complexion, was fluminated by a pair of large blue eyes, brimming over with intrigue and cunning. One could trace the plotting and scheming of his profession in every lineament of his face.

"Seeing your advertisement," I began, "I called to consult you about a divorce. SOL COLEMAN. Memphis, Tenn. COTTON-TIE.

First Premium Awarded by the Texas State Fair, the Cele brated "Arrow-Tie" being one of its Com-

IN odering to planters the GRIP-T.E. the follow ing advantages are claimed for it: Simplicity of application, greater strength, both of the Tie and of the Band, close adjustment and freedem from slip, which prevent any expansion of the bale, and the impossibility of removing the Band without cutting it. The award of the BiGHEST PREMIUM by the Teas State Fair to the GRIP-THE over the Arrow and all other competitors, its simply an indovement of the opinion expressed by all planters who have used it, as can be shown by letters and certificates in our possession.

Arrangements have been made for the manufacture of Bands of superior quality and in sufficient quantity to supply any demand, and for the present the price will be $2.50 per bundle, of thirty Bands each.

Bands each.

The recent reduction in the price of thes was probably due to the competition of the GRIP-TIE, and as we offer a superior article at the same price, we trust dealers and consumers will reco, rize our claim to a fair share of patronage. J. R. GODWIN & CO., General Agents,
